Two men were making a wall by the roadside, and Harry and Dora stopped to look at them. Another man was going away with a wheelbarrow. The wheelbarrow was empty, but it had been full of red bricks. The men were putting these bricks on the wall and making them fast with mortar.

Dora liked the sound which the trowel made when it struck against the wall. Harry picked up one of the bricks and looked at it, and then Dora must look at one too. They found that the bricks were light, easy and to lift. They also saw that they were all of the same size and shape, as if they had been made, and not dug out of the ground. They did not like to ask the men about them, and so they put the bricks down, and set off on their way home.
