

Conjunctions and Commas

Use a comma between the main clauses in a compound sentence when you use the following conjunctions: and, but, or, nor, for, so, or, yet. Place the comma before the coordinating conjunction.

Rewrite each sentence below, correcting any errors in the use of commas.

Do you have a little brother, or sister?

Benjamin franklin lived to be a very old man but he never forget that lesson.

We better put the toys away or Mom will be very angry, when she sees the mess.

He was not a student, yet.

We have been away from home for a long time and we are now anxious to get home again.

Sue does not know how draw nor, is she willing to learn how to draw.

Thank you, for joining us today.

John looked worried, yet expectant.