THE QUARREL

Under a great tree in the (park, woods, forest); two boys saw a fine, large nut, and both (dived, leaped, ran) to get it. James got to it first, and picked it up. “It is mine,” said John, “for I was the first to (spy, glance, spot) it.” “No, it is mine” said James, “for I was the first to (pick, touch, gather) it up.” Thus, they at once began to (discuss, quarrel, differ) about the nut. As they could not agree whose it should be, they called an older boy, and asked him. The older boy said, “I will (help you understand each other, settle this quarrel, show you how to agree, force you to agree)”.

He took the nut, and broke the shell. He then took out the (kernel, nut, pea) and divided the shell into two parts, as nearly equal as he could. “This half of the shell” said he, “belongs to the boy who first saw the nut. “And this half belongs to the boy who picked it up. The kernel of the nut, I shall keep as my pay for (helping you understand each other, settling this quarrel, showing you how to agree).”

“This is the way,” said he, laughing, “in which (discussions, quarrels, differences) are very apt to end.”
